How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

For the 12-month period ended June 30, 2024, the Fund outperformed its benchmark, the S&P 500 Index.

The largest market capitalization companies continue to dominate investors’ interest and have led the returns in the marketplace. Fund holdings Microsoft and Apple each surpassed a $3 trillion market valuation, a feat unimaginable just a few years ago. Within the larger capitalization category, growth stocks have significantly outperformed value stocks.

WHAT FACTORS INFLUENCED PERFORMANCE

Security selection had a larger effect on the portfolio than sector allocation. The outperformance of the Fund was driven by Communication Services, Consumer Discretionary and Industrials sectors. These sectors had a significantly higher return than the sectors in the Index. Within these sectors, Alphabet, Meta Platforms, Amazon, GE Aerospace and United Rentals were top contributors to the Fund’s return. Interestingly, the Information Technology sector was the Fund’s second biggest contributor to return but the largest detractor as compared to the Index. The sector in the Fund had a lower weighting and lower return than the Index.

POSITIONING

The sector weightings did not change meaningfully during the twelve-month period. We focus on individual company selection and seek to incorporate a reasonable balance of sector exposure as part of our risk management process. We believe that companies in the same sectors can vary as greatly in their business economics and profiles as companies in completely different sectors.

PERFORMANCE

The portfolio return exceeded the S&P 500 Index. Security selection had a larger effect on the portfolio than sector allocation.
