How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

For the 12-month period ended June 30, 2024, the Fund underperformed its regulatory benchmark, the Russell 1000 Index.

WHAT FACTORS INFLUENCED PERFORMANCE

The main factor influencing performance is our style and area of focus. Our strategy tends to look for small-capitalization equities that have an opportunity to grow at an above average rate over the long-term. Due to our focus on smaller companies, we do not purchase mid-cap or large-cap stocks. Thus, we never considered some of the most prolific gainers in the large-cap space such as Microsoft, Nvidia, Alphabet and other mega-cap technology names along with a number of the best performers in Healthcare.

POSITIONING

Our philosophy harnesses the power of compounding, focusing on “3G” businesses (durable Growth, sound Governance, scalable Go-to-market strategies) that have a higher than average probability of making the journey from small-cap to mid-cap (and perhaps large-cap) than most companies. Since we are more closely aligned with the smaller capitalization universe, we are massively underweight Information Technology and considerably overweight Healthcare.

PERFORMANCE

The 12-month period ending June 30, 2024 was challenging due to our lack of ownership of any of the large-cap stocks that drove the Russell 1000 Index over this period. This produced a massive underweight to strong performing sectors such as Information Technology, Communication Services and Financials.
